Main living area A massive stone wall and fireplace anchor the conversation area, where plenty of seating options allow for relaxed entertaining. The tufted ottomans from Lee Industries can serve multiple purposes—for seating, as foot rests, and as tables. Chandeliers at each end of the room are from Foundry Lighting.

Remember when...

Alabama native Bobby McAlpine, an architect for 30 years, has been featured many times in the pages of Traditional Home. He looks forward to a bright future in residential design.

"There is so much communication today. Clients are exposed to great design and are more sophisticated than ever," he says. "Recently, we've seen a renewed appreciation for authentic materials, craftsmanship, and the subtleties of design. Clients are oftentimes choosing a smaller home with more attention to detail. I relish building out of stone, wood, thatch—materials that are common, yet authentic," he adds. "I feel confident we are embarking on an era of great residential architecture like we witnessed 100 years ago in America."

A large, rustic living room with a blue sofa, a chandelier, and a staircase. The room features a large, dark wood staircase on the left, a chandelier with multiple white shades, and a large painting of a landscape. A blue sofa with two pillows is in the foreground, and a white ottoman is in front of it. A large, dark wood pillar stands on the right. A floor lamp with a white shade is in the background. A window with a grid pattern is on the right. A wooden table with a lamp is visible through a doorway in the background.

Main living area Designer Susan Ferrier chose large-scale furnishings in keeping with the room's proportions, including a "Castle Praha" sofa from Lee Industries. The "Cocktail" ottoman was designed by McAlpine.
